Solutions like Klipper are very charming, but you always have to make the detour via a RasPi and reprogram the printer hardware. Not very comfortable for the people (beginners).

My idea is to update the printer electronics directly to have more speed and comfort without special external hardware and software. The RasPi solution costs more time and money to install and requires a lot of expert knowledge ...

So to bring the printer into a network and improve the speed, the ESP is certainly a good solution.
